RE: Speaking Invitation
U.S. Army War College
Carlisle Barracks, Pennsylvania
6 June 1989

Major General Howard D. Graves, Commandant of the Army War College, Carlisle Barracks, has invited you to address the War College's 35th Annual National Security Seminar to be held 5-9 June 1989. As one of four guest speakers, you are asked to make a presentation Tuesday, 6 June at 9:00 a.m. on international issues facing the United States. The suggested format is 50 minutes of remarks, a 20-minute break, and 50 minutes of questions and answers. The audience will number about 500 -- 288 members of the War College class, which includes 33 International Fellows, about 100 faculty and staff, and 120 civilian guests from around the country. While the War College suggests the program will not be for attribution, foreign military officers from all over the world will be in the audience; and, among the civilian guests invited, some are likely to be journalists.

The seminar provides an opportunity for future military leaders to discuss domestic and international issues that influence our national security. Last year, former DDCI Admiral Inman spoke at the seminar.

I recommend that you accept this invitation. If you agree, a letter is attached for your signature.

Dear Mr. Gates:

I would like to invite you to address the U.S. Army War College's 35th Annual National Security Seminar to be held June 5-9, 1989 in Carlisle, Pennsylvania. We would like you to speak on international issues facing the United States. You will be one of four guest speakers that week; others will address domestic, defense and Army issues.

We have designed the War College curriculum to assist our students in developing a greater appreciation of the Army's role in a democratic society and to be more sensitive to the range of competing domestic and international factors that influence national security. The manner in which our country allocates its resources and sets its priorities is vital to our study of national security. Your experience and perspective on international factors that will impact America's security into the 21st Century will add much to this learning process.

The Seminar is the capstone of the academic year. It is designed to bring together a broad cross section of American citizens with our students who represent the future leadership of the defense establishment. Our objective is to provide a privileged forum in which distinguished leaders can present their views frankly and an environment wherein our students can listen, discuss and learn from the perspectives of our non-military guests.

There will be 500 people in the audience: 288 members of the War College class, including 33 International Fellows from allied and non-aligned nations who participate fully with their American counterparts throughout the academic year; 120 civilian guests from across the country who are selected to provide the widest possible range of backgrounds and interests; and about 100 faculty and staff.

We would like you to speak on June 6 at 9:00 a.m. for 50 minutes with a 20-minute break and 50-minute question and answer period to follow. We will operate under a nonattribution policy unless you specify otherwise. We have some flexibility with dates and times since we are early in the planning process.

I have enclosed a prospectus and guest list from last year's program to provide added insight into our Seminar objectives and the composition of our invited guests. If you desire more information on our goals and objectives, your staff may contact Colonel Phil Thompson at 717/245-3321.

Thank you for your kind consideration.

Sincerely,

Howard D. Graves

Dear Mr. Gates,

The American University Journal of International Law and Policy would like to invite you to submit papers on recent developments in international organizations or articles on any public or private international law topic. The Journal offers authors opportunities to publish articles of the traditional sort: comments and casenotes dealing with a variety of topics in international law and policy.

In addition, the Journal offers authors opportunities to publish shorter articles addressing recent developments in international organizations. Articles and Recent Developments papers are now being solicited for the Spring and Summer 1989 issues.

Articles appearing through Volume 4 of the Journal include:

- * "Public International Law as a Career" by Anthony D'Amato.
- * "The Settlement of Disputes Regarding Foreign Investment: The Role of the World Bank, with Particular Reference to ICSID and MIGA" by Ibrahim F. I. Shihata.
- * "The Sources of International Law" by David Kennedy.
- * "Strengthening World Order: Reversing the Slide to Anarchy" by John Norton Moore.

Recent Developments pieces in the Journal include:

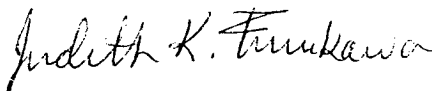

P-310-11

- * "Conference Report: Human Rights into the 1990s and Beyond."
- * "The First Contentious Case Before the Inter-American Court of Human Rights."
- * "Institutional Reform Under the Single European Act."

The Journal is a non-profit student publication. It is currently included in the Legal Index of the American Association of Law Librarians and the Current Law Index/Legal Resources Index. In addition, the Journal will soon be included in Westlaw.

The Journal greatly appreciates all submissions and notifies authors of publication decisions as quickly as possible. Please direct all questions and correspondence to the appropriate editor at the above address.

Sincerely,

Judith K. Furukawa
